I'm her mother. She has had modeling offers. The problem involves her popularity. She goes with several fellows, all from nice homes and never dates a young man unless we meet him first. The trouble is she invites the boys in after a movie or a dance and they sit up talking and playing records until 2:00 or 3:00 a.m.

Is this proper? Sometimes there's another couple or two, but usually it's just Miss J and a beau. My husband doesn't approve of it. What do you say?

—M. G.
Dear M. G.: I'm in favor of girls inviting their boy friends in after a date. It's a great deal more wholesome than parking in the weeds. There should be a curfew, however. Boys shouldn't be permitted to hang around, indefinitely. I say 2:00 a.m. (occasionally) is late enough for a gal 17.
